

Is your thesis disorganised?

Don't worry! It is normal. And if you're reading this...You are in the right place.

Organisation is the secret to keep the best pace, and the Project management course at KU will give you the tools to organise, control and manage into the main struggling factors that you can face during this process. You will be able to deliver the best quality project, minimising stress and time consumption by using this course knowledge and tools.

She forgot to take Project management before her thesis and now has big regrets.

*"Be your own leader!
Project your dreams into reality!"*

Elements to a good project plan

To make a good project plan, it can be quite effective to know how to successfully do problem solving and to know your own working style in-depth and how best with others in a team. These five elements can guide you to make a great thesis, whether you are making it alone or together with others!

Planning methods
Waterfall or agile? Which style suits your needs?
Project costs and complexity!

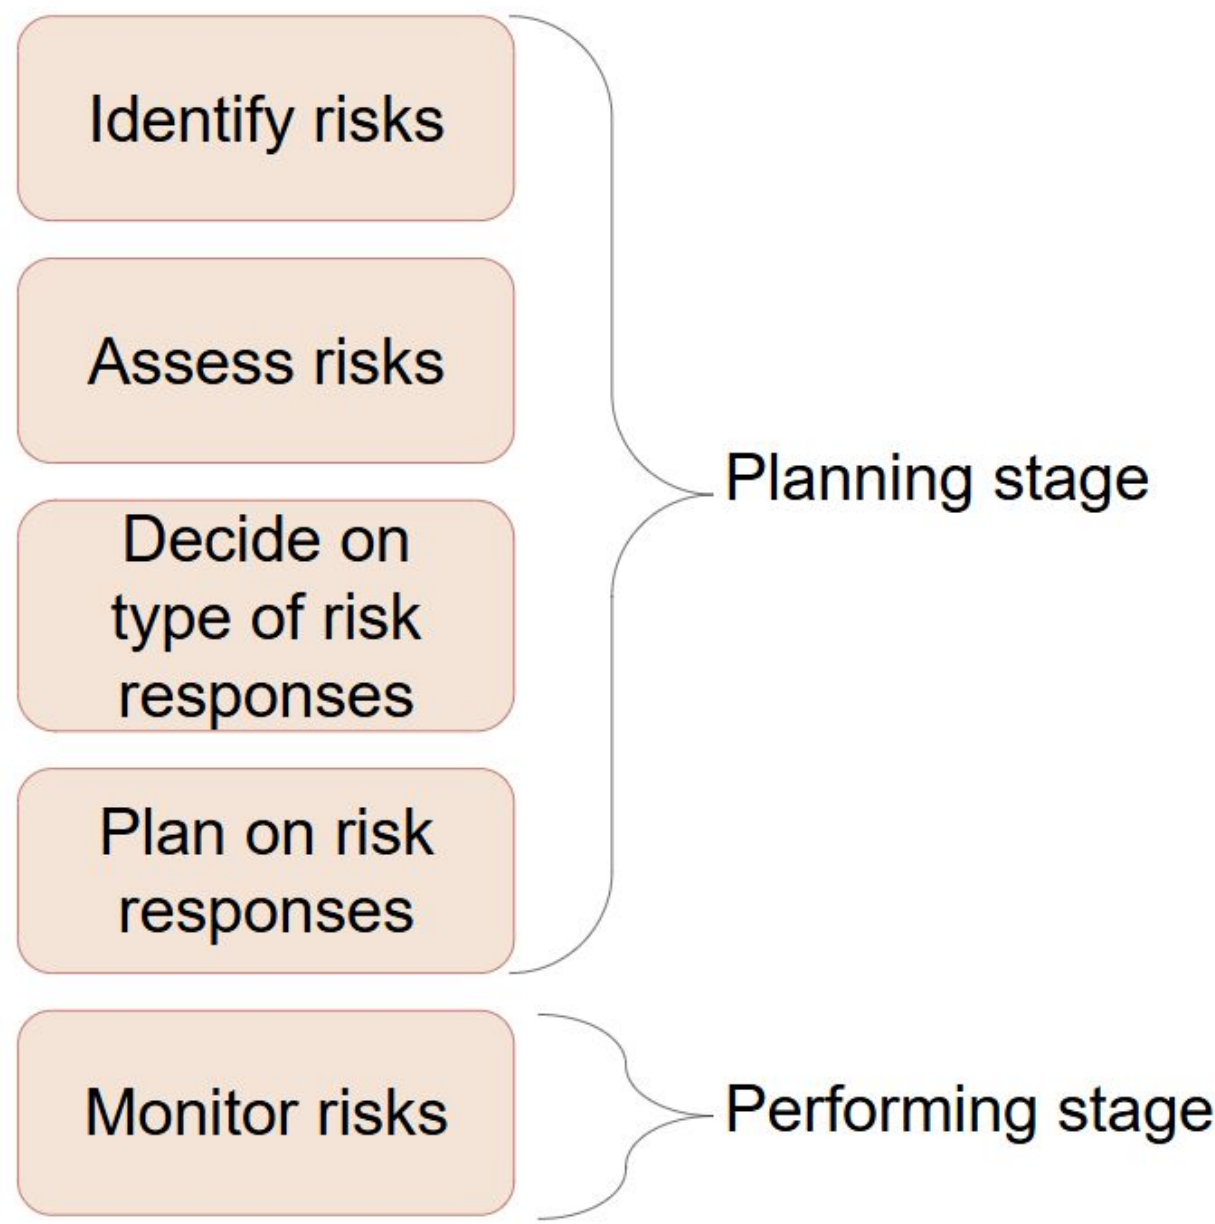

Goal hierarchy
Helps connect your abstract ideas to very specific deliverables.

JTI personality test
What is your team's personality type?
What strategies can you use to work better together?

Conflict Management
Identify the substances, procedures and relationships, separate the people from the problems!

Project Charter
Will give an overview of the project
and very useful for an elevator pitch!

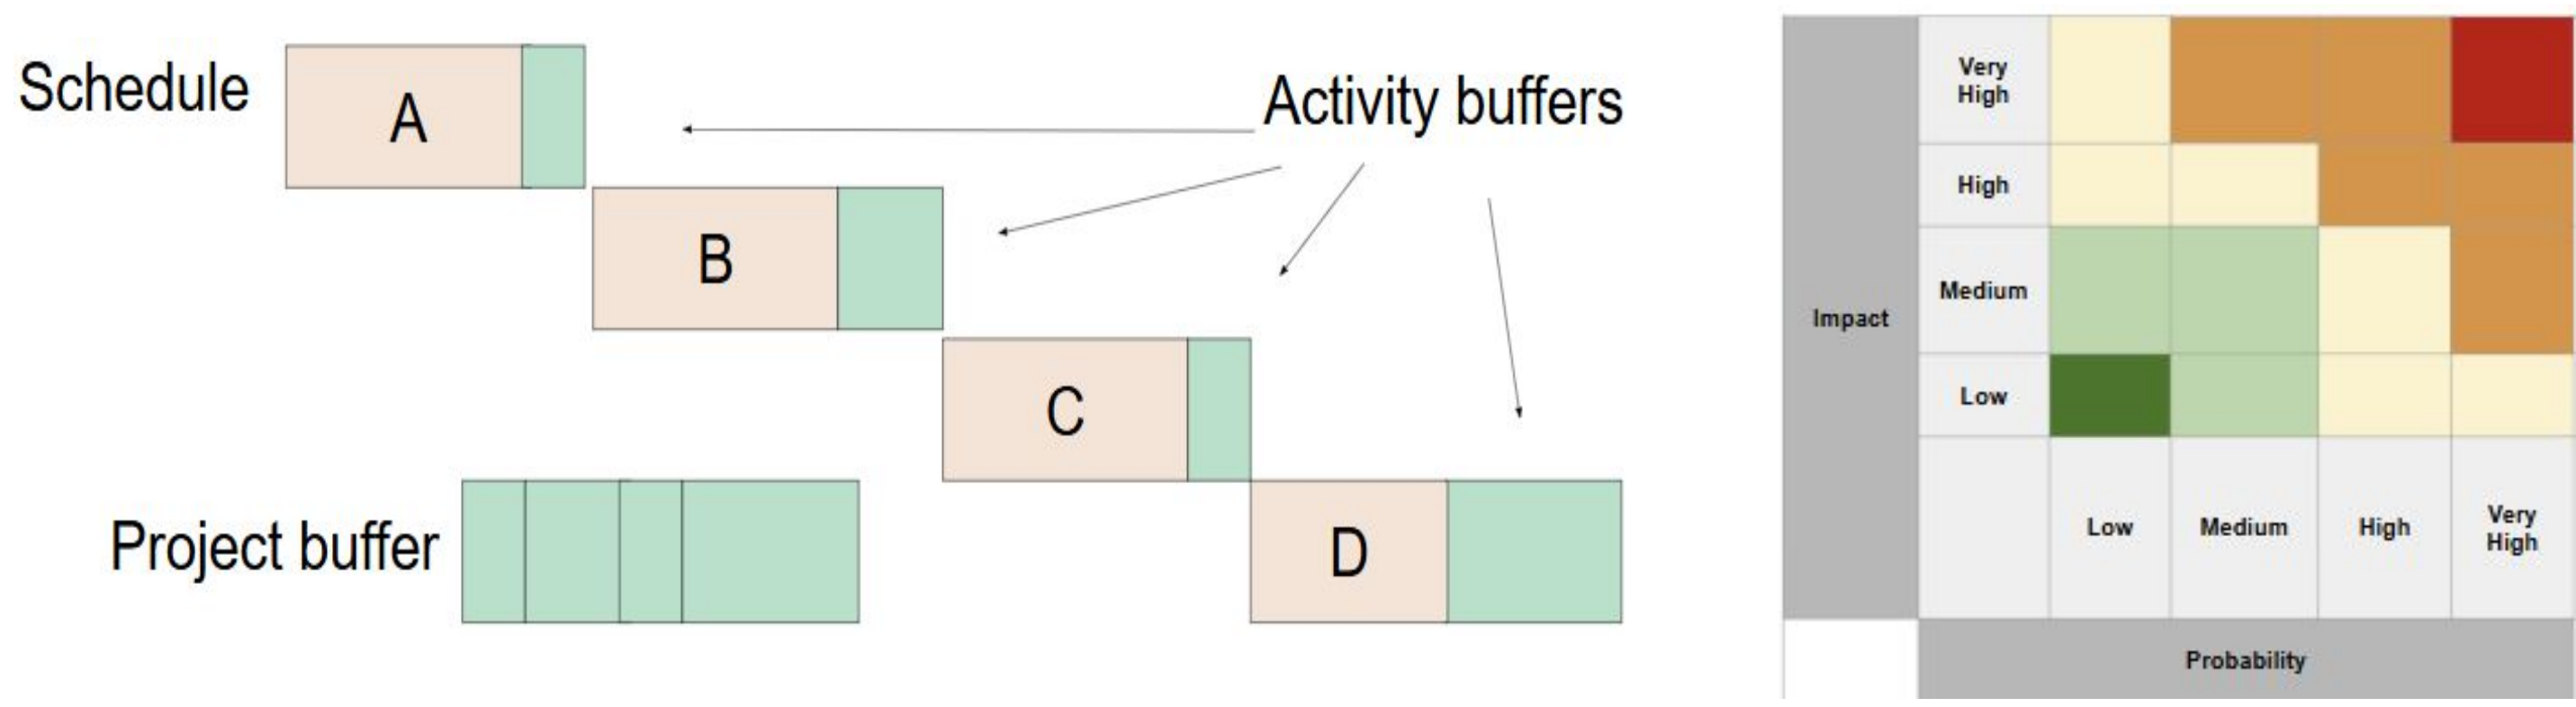

Risk management

When you are starting on your thesis you might experience, that some things don't go as you have planned.

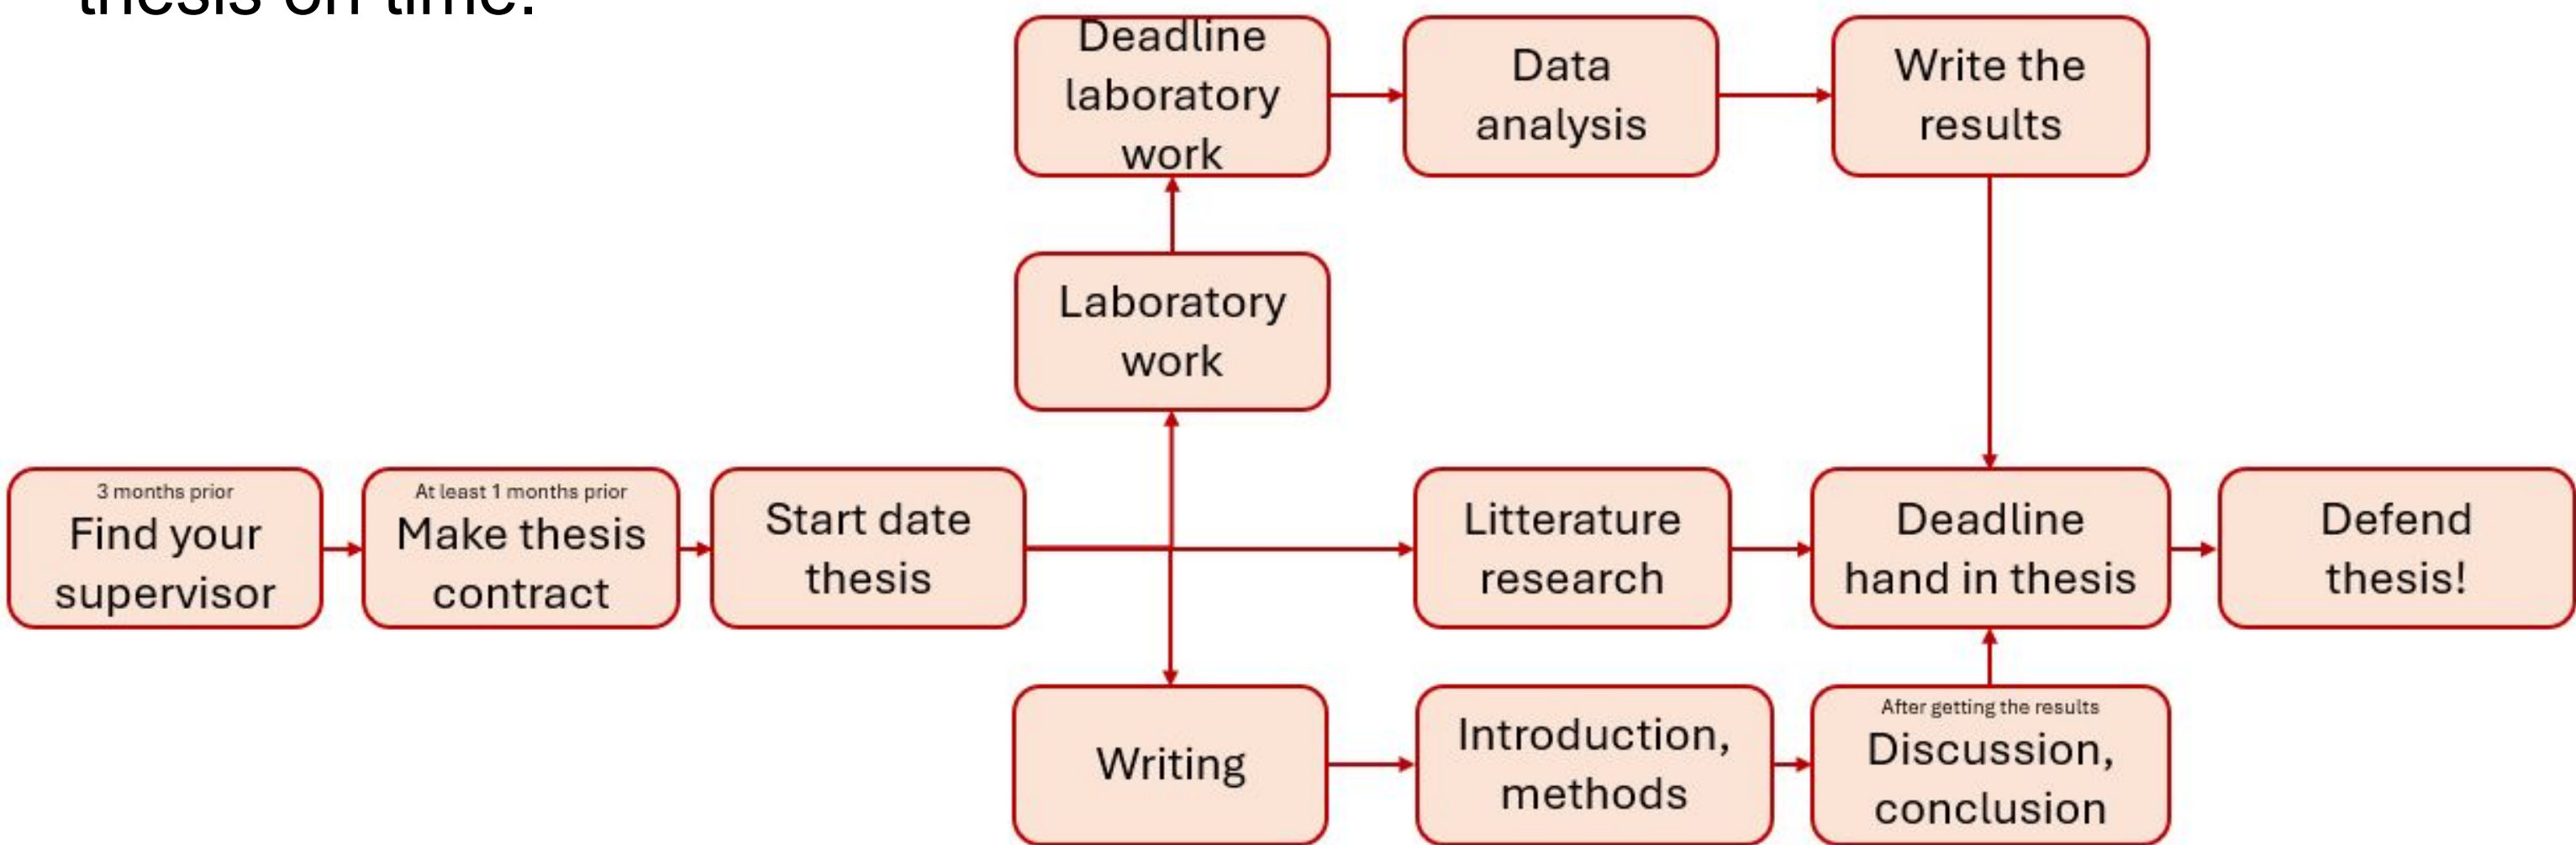

For this reason it is good to know about risk management and how to handle unforeseen events.

Know, assess, and acting on risks is the best strategy to manage uncertainties. Time is another constraint, but in the course you will learn how to manage it by using buffers!

Network Diagram

A network diagram is a great tool for your thesis where you will learn how to use in Project management! It helps you in getting a nice overview of the process and when you need to finish different tasks in order to finish your thesis on time.

Apply to Project Management on KU website before 15/11/2025

